- ① ここでは、六つの会話が流れます。それぞれの会話の後に質問が一つ読まれます。質問に対する答えとして最も適切なものを一つ選び、記号で答えなさい。会話と質問は一度だけ読まれます。なお、メモを取っても構いません。

Number 1

Man: Today was a bad day.

Woman: Why? What happened?

Man: I didn't do well on my English exam.

Question: What will the woman probably say next?

Number 2

Man: Is everything alright?

Woman: No, it's not. I need to write my science report tonight, but I can't find my notebook.

Man: Where did you last use it?

Woman: I was reading it in the cafeteria while eating lunch.

Man: Did you take it with you?

Woman: I thought so. I went to the library to use a computer after lunch.

Man: It might be in the cafeteria. I'll help you search for it.

Question: What is the woman doing now?

Number 3

Woman: Are you ready to order?

Man: Yes. I would like to have the grilled fish and green vegetables.

Woman: Oh, I'm sorry. We don't have any fish this evening. Would you like to try our famous roast chicken instead?

Man: Yes, please.

Woman: Would you like to change the green vegetables to French fries?

Man: That does sound good. I do want to be healthy though... Hmm... I'll keep the vegetables.

Question: What is the man going to have for dinner?

Number 4

Woman: Are you ready to go?

Man: What? Bill's party starts at 4 pm. We still have three hours.

Woman: I don't want to be late. It's a 10-minute walk to the bus stop. The bus takes 20 minutes to reach the train station and the train journey is two hours. We then have a twenty-minute walk to Bill's house.

Man: You're forgetting it's the weekend. The express train will only take one hour today. Also, Bill has moved closer to the train station so the walk to his house now takes 10 minutes.

Woman: I still want to go now.

Man: Fine. Let's leave now. We can help him prepare.

Question: What time will the man and woman reach Bill's house?

Number 5

Man: Next week is exam week. What shall we study tonight?

Woman: I think we should focus on Math. The Math exam is on the first day.

Man: Chemistry is also on the first day. It's our strongest subject, so I'm not worried about it. I need the most help with History.

Woman: I need the most help with English, but English is on the last day.

Man: Let's start with Math and then you can help me with my worst subject.

Woman: That's a great plan.

Question: What will the man and woman study tonight?

Number 6

Woman: Do we have all the items for the new computer?

Man: Yes. The $150 monitor is here. We then have the $15 mouse, the $25 keyboard, and this set of speakers for $50.

Woman: Why did you choose those expensive speakers?

Man: This brand had the best sound quality.

Woman: I suggest that we choose this other brand, which is half the price. The sound will be fine.

Man: I would like to keep the nicer speakers. To save some money, I won't get the mouse. I have one at home already.

Woman: It's still expensive... Can't you just use headphones?

Man: I don't like headphones. I guess I'll take the speakers you recommended.

Question: How much will the man and woman spend?

Number 1

Hi, Randy. I guess your phone must be off. Perhaps you're still in class? I just wanted to call to tell you that we're back from our camping trip in Canada. Do you remember how we spent weeks beforehand getting ready? – Lisa and Sue packed so much stuff. Anyway, by the time we arrived at the campsite, some bad weather had already started and we could see we weren't going to have the dry weather we were hoping for. Luckily, our tent was nice and dry, so we decided to make the best of it. It was then that I realized how glad I was that Lisa and Sue had been so prepared. They had packed some board games and playing cards. After the rain, we managed to go on a few great hikes in the forest but we missed swimming in the lake. Do we want to go back next year? I'm not really sure. I think Sue is hoping to go to Europe. Anyway, I can tell you more later since I'll be seeing you this Saturday. Bye for now!

Question 1: Why is the woman leaving a voice message?

Question 2: What does the woman say about her holiday?

Number 2

Opening your mouth wide like this (yawn sound) – this is called yawning. Today's class is going to be covering this common animal action. Now humans often yawn when they are bored or tired. Does this mean the same is true for animals when they do it? Well, that depends, based on the animals we are looking at.

Some animals yawn to scare away enemies from their home areas. Fish and lizards are perfect examples of animals that do this. They open their mouths very widely and stay that way for a long period of time.

Social animals, like chimpanzees or lions, yawn to decide who has the higher rank in their social groups. The animal with the biggest yawn is likely to be the leader of the group.

Now hippos are different – they use yawns when they want to make peace after a battle. Researchers have seen a pair of hippos yawn at each other for up to two hours before they both felt the fight was truly finished.

Sometimes animals yawn simply out of physical need— to increase oxygen levels. Interestingly, when they yawn for a reason like that, they act just like we humans do—they try to hide it by covering their mouths.

We'll find more information on page 27...

Question 1: What does the man say about yawning?

Question 2: Which animal yawns to end a fight?
